Public Interest Technology

<https://www.cfnova.org/register/public-interest-technology>

11:30 AM - 12:30 PM EST

Tara Nadel, 7038797637

tara.nadel@cfnova.org

Public Interest Technology is a new field of interest that introduces big data, inclusive community input, and design thinking to some of the most complex public problems of our day. Thought leaders from New America and Virginia Tech are already in the field, working with communities to identify their most pressing issues and to devise technological solutions thereto. Join us for a fascinating and inspiring discussion of the thought, process, platforms, and actions constituting public interest technology and its possible application in our most under-resourced communities.

We need public interest technologists. People who sit at the intersection of big data and inclusive community input. People who want to use their tech and data expertise to promote the common good. Enter, stage left, Public Interest Technology. Thought leaders from New America and Virginia Tech are already framing the field and beginning to understand its power to create change for our most under-resourced communities.

Please join us on September 27 at 11:30 for a virtual discussion with two of the country's leading experts.

Join the Community Foundation for Northern Virginia and help "Raise the Region" at its annual celebration of local philanthropy.

This event attracts hundreds of regional business, philanthropic and community leaders and supports the Community Foundation's ability to grow philanthropy to respond to need and seed innovation throughout the region. The event will be live-streamed, and sponsors and guests will have the option to host "pod parties" complete with food and wine provided by the Community Foundation or join from the comfort of home.

It will include an online auction that will be promoted to the Community Foundation's network of more than 12,000 individuals, a video that will air live right from this page or from your device after you have logged in on October 8th at 7:00 pm, and opportunities to engage and connect with our community.

Sponsorships are available from $250 and include visibility throughout the year and during the event. Registration to participate in the event and online auction is free.
